Parivarthan has the distinction of being the only credible counseling training school in India that I know. By virtue of being the first in a society and culture where there has been no precedence, it deserves the award. Its easier to incrementally improve than to create the foundation and lay the brickwork.

Parivarthan has done a great job of adapting counseling training to Indian settings. I attended the BSIC program and found it has given me a really sound perspective on the core skills, theory and practices. It is designed to cater to diverse styles of learning and backgrounds and everyone in my class benefited.

I'd also like to point out Parivarthan's social leadership in a environment where in general, most education centers operate with the primary perspective of increasing their revenue. Parivarthan does not aggressively "sell" counseling. Their fee operates on a sliding scale to enable the less privileged to also gain.

The institute upholds high standards of ethics and demonstrates counseling qualities in their daily operations. I would like to congratulate the entire staff – manager/admin, faculty, counselors, well-wishers etc for their excellence.
